I am an attorney that represents government agencies and entities.

We represent, amongst others, the Pender County Tax collector.

We file hundreds of lawsuits a year, notarizing dozens of affidavits per lawsuit.

How about a rule that says that paralegals don't have to keep logs when notarizing documents of their immediate supervising attorney.

I'm certain that there are other occupations that require hundreds of notarizations between a specific notary and a specific signor.

Perhaps there would be a way to as a Notary, "register" a common notary subject. For example, my paralegals Tameeka, Tammy, and Stephanie could list me as a specific individual that wouldn't require a log entry.

It wouldn't apply to any non-registered individual. That would be fair game.

Another idea would to have a notary app where they notary opened the app and took a photo of the document which would be uploaded to a database. Data entry by the notary would need to be close to nothing. But, if something came up, there would be a record with notary name, date and time.

Thank you,
Chip.
